As I mentioned above, I am an aspiring first-time home buyer and am deeply aware of some of the issues facing people trying to enter the housing market. Much has been done to improve the supply of housing and improve affordability, but it is insufficient.

I support the NDP's plan to explore non-market solutions to solving the housing crisis, notably opening up public land for rent-controlled housing.

New Democrats also plan to stop giant corporate landlords from buying up the supply of affordable homes and launch a massive house-building program.
